

State Editor Has Meeting With Nixon

WASHINGTON — Ferdie J. Deering, editor of The Farmer - Stockman, magazine, was one of 10 farm publication officials who met Thursday with President Nixon to discuss what the White House said were matters of interest to rural and farm areas.

The magazine is published in Oklahoma City by The Oklahoma Publishing Co. Editions are printed for three states.

Deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said the meeting was routine.

Other magazine representatives were:

Lane Palmer, editor of Farm Journal, Philadelphia; Wayne Swegle, managing editor of Successful Farming, Des Moines, Iowa; Joe A. Elliott, vice president and editorial director of The Progressive Farmer, Birmingham, Ala., and Robert G. Rupp, editor of The Farmer. St. Paul. Minn.

Also, William D. Klox, editor of Hoard's Dairyman, Fort Atkinson, Wis.; Royal Fraedrick, editor of Big Farmer, Frankfort, Ill.; Thomas Huheey, publisher of Farm Quarterly, Cincinnati, Ohio; Jack Pickett, editor of California Farmer, San Francisco, and Cordell Tindall, vice president and editor, Missouri Ruralist, Fayette.