Dear Ferdie:

I have seen many people retire in the company during the past 19 years and your absence will have a greater impact than anyone else who has ever retired. You have always been friendly, courteous, thoughtful, and considerate and you have gone out of your way to talk to anyone from a janitor to a department head. All of these same things can be said about your lovely bride as well.

We are going to miss seeing you at the management meetings, and, of course, your smiling face during the rest of the week. Mary and I would like to take you and Mildred out to dinner at an early date, and we will be calling you real soon.

In the meantime, here's wishing you and Mildred the best of luck during your retirement years. May God bless you.

Sincerely,
