Re: WORK CAN BE FUN

Dear Mr. Deering:

The name given as copyright claimant at space 4 of your application differs from the name(s) given as author at space 2. The transfer statement in space 4 does not clearly indicate how this transfer of ownership took place.

For purposes of copyright registration, the copyright claimant is either the author of a work or the person or organization that has obtained ownership of all rights under the copyright initially belonging to the author. This latter category also includes a person or organization that has obtained the contractual right to claim legal title to the copyright in an application for copyright registration.

If the name in space 4 identifies the copyright claimant as defined here, please complete a new application in which space 4 contains a transfer statement which clearly shows how these rights were acquired. A "transfer of copyright ownership" is an assignment or other conveyance of a copyright. Therefore, "by assignment," "by written agreement," "inherited by will," and similar statements indicating how the rights were obtained are acceptable.

If the name in space 4 of your original application is not that of the copyright claimant, please file a new application which names the correct claimant at space 4. If the claimant is other than the author(s), be sure to complete the transfer statement.

In your reply, please refer to the date of this letter and
CASH NO. 175312 (D).

Sincerely yours,
Gerald E. Moylan
Acting Head, Literary Section
Examining Division
